

The more people who focus on the farm's biosecurity and the more measures that are implemented, the lower the risk of contracting diseases such as bird flu.

Take the chance to educate yourselves and everyone who works with your laying hens in biosecurity. On Svenska Ägg's member pages, you will find a digital course that provides practical tips and advice on how to strengthen the farm's biosecurity.

You can watch the course when you want and as many times as you want. There is also a Swedish version of the same course.

From the first suspicion of disease until the barn has been disinfected and new animals are brought in; the process is complex. The affected farm must follow Swedish legislation, which is governed by the European Animal Health Law. Restrictions are also imposed on nearby farms. What rules apply? How do you prepare yourself and your farm?

On Svenska Ägg's member pages, you'll find a digital course that provides both guidance and practical tips on what happens when a farm is affected by a disease. You can watch the course whenever you want and as many times as you like.
